How to beat the long arm centipede giraffe. Is long arm centipede optional. Long arm centipede location.

Long-arm Centipede Sen'un is the nest mini boss fight in Sekiro, found in the game's Senpou Temple area, following on from Armored Warrior in our walkthrough of the game's bosses and mini-bosses. You'll find Long-arm Centipede Sen'un inside a building down on the bottom right side of the area with a hole in one side of its roof, if you continue onwards and keep hanging right from the Senpou Temple - Temple Grounds idol. Below, we'll cover how to beat Sekiro's Long-arm Centipede Sen'un, including any particularly strong methods or weaknesses they might have and any handy things to bear in mind. For more guides and pages like this, meanwhile, cycle back to our main Sekiro walkthrough and boss guide hub. The first of two Long-arm Centipede bosses you'll face, Sen'un takes a bit of brief setting-up first if you want to beat it easily, but it'll make a real difference and won't take long. How to set up Long-arm Centipede Sen'un Enter the building where the monstrosity is waiting and stay on the rafters above it. Pick off all of the smaller centipede-people up there, and then drop down and pick off the rest on the bottom floor as quickly and safely as possible - remember you can grapple up and down from the rafters quite easily to help you get out of any corners. There are a couple the other side of a panel that blocks the ground-floor exit from the building, too - when they're dealt with, hide from the Long-arm Centipede Sen'un until you lose aggro, and then go back up onto the rafters - stealthily - and drop down to land a free Deathblow for one of its two marks. How to beat Long-arm Centipede Sen'un Now, it's just a case of doing two things: deflecting every attack, and jumping on Sen'un's head when it does its Perilous Attack, which is always a pincer-like swipe with both arms, and always a Sweep attack. Looking for more Sekiro pages like this? First up, the first main Sekiro patch notes for update 1.03 are live. Otherwise, our Sekiro boss guide, boss list and walkthrough hub has everything in one place, including pages on Lady Butterfly, Genichiro Ashina Way of Tomoe, Folding Screen Monkeys, Corrupted Monk, Guardian Ape, Great Shinobi Owl, Emma and Isshin Ashina, True Corrupted Monk, and Divine Dragon. We also have in-depth pages like Sekiro tips and tricks to get you started, Sekiro Skills, skill tree and Esoteric Text locations explained, our deep dive on the Sekiro combat system, Posture, and Perilous Attacks, or details on all Sekiro Prosthetic Tool locations, how to cure Dragonrot and Rot Essence in Sekiro, Gourd Seed locations, a Divine Confetti farm route method, all Treasure Carp Scale locations, all, Prayer Beads locations and all Snap Seed locations, too. And when you're ready - the how to beat Isshin Sword Saint and an Isshin Sword Saint cheese, plus the many Sekiro endings. If you like, hold down block to first time it does a flurry of attacks just to get the rhythm, and grapple up to the rafters to let your Posture recover, but then one way or another you're going to need to get parrying. Face it head on, don't bother touching the dodge button, and just try to deflect every attack in its cycle. Be ready to jump when you see the red Perilous Attack symbol, for some hefty Posture Damage, and repeat that once or twice and the Long-arm Centipede's Posture bar will likely already be full, ready for you to finish it with a Deathblow - job done! If you're really struggling, you can also cheese it, to an extent, by hopping up and down from the rafters for one aerial hit at a time, but it's honestly not worth the effort. Just keep cool, focus on sound and timing instead of how intimidating the centipede looks, and it'll go down easy. That's all you'll hopefully need for tackling this encounter. Next up in our guide is Folding Screen Monkeys, or you can cycle back to our main Sekiro walkthrough and boss guide hub for much more explainers and advice. FromSoftware/Activision via Polygon Sekiro's Long-arm Centipede Giraffe boss fight is a creepy retread, but this time you've got to fight in a room the size of a walk-in closet. In this guide, we'll show you how to defeat Long-arm Centipede Giraffe, the items you should bring with you, and strategies to react to its attacks. The best items and moves for Long-arm Centipede Giraffe Long-arm Centipede Giraffe only has one attack speed: fast. It deals a lot of Posture damage in a short amount of time, and that doesn't give you much chance to recuperate. Here's what you should bring to ease your suffering. Gokan's Sugar. This Prosthetic Tool, too. View source Long-arm Centipede Giraffe (長手の百足 ジラフ, Long Arm Centipede Jirafu) is a mandatory Mini-Boss with two Deathblow Counters. He's located inside the shrine in the Gun Fort of the Sunken Valley. As the Sixth Prayer Necklace states, among Centipedes their leaders are called "long-arm" due to their claws. Centipede Giraffe boss fight Long-arm Centipede Giraffe's attacks Let's talk about Long-arm Centipede Giraffe's attacks, how to identify them, and what you should do about them. Claw flurry Giraffe's primary attack is a barrage of claw swipes. You can block them all, but watch your Posture bar. There are at least two variations, both of which you can see above. Its most common version is a 10-attack flurry, but Giraffe also has a 3-attack flavor. Your goal is the same, regardless: Block to survive. Perilous Attack: Grab The more Long-arm Centipede Giraffe uses its Perilous Attack, the better it is for you. A red kanji appears, Giraffe stretches its arms to its side, and then grabs for Sekiro. Jump to avoid the attack, and then press the jump button again to land on Giraffe's head and deal significant Posture damage with a Jump Kick. Sekiro's attacks This fight is almost entirely about keeping your Posture damage under control while dealing some damage in between Long-arm Centipede Giraffe's flurries. The Jump Kicks you hand out after his Perilous Attack are the most powerful arrow in your quiver, and you can win the fight that way if you're patient enough. Perfect Deflects will also chip away at his Posture — and because he attacks and so much so often, this is your other area of focus. Shinobi Firecracker This is particularly useful at the beginning of the fight and after Long-arm Centipede Giraffe ends one of its flurries. Throw firecrackers, stun your enemy, and attack a few times to deal some Vitality (health) damage. Then get back to blocking. Deflect Deflects deal a surprising amount of Posture damage. There's a rhythm to his claw attacks. Learn it. Start tapping block instead of holding it. Time out your taps to match his rhythm — counting helped us get the timing down. You don't have to Deflect every attack perfectly, but every Deflect you land will drive his Posture damage up. Long-arm Centipede Giraffe drops, items, and rewards Defeat Long-arm Centipede Giraffe, and you'll receive Yellow Gunpowder. Pick up the Large Fan sitting on an altar nearby for a new Prosthetic Tool, too. Behaviour and Tactics Flurry: it will unleash a flurry of four swipes, slow down for a moment and then continue with another set of five swipes, before charging a stronger attack to finish the combo. If the final hit is deflected, he'll dash back, preparing to launch his Perilous Grip. Quick Slash: a shorter variant of his other combo, he'll now only throw three swipes in rapid succession and immediately follow it up with the Perilous Grip. Perilous Grip: He will extend his arms and swipe near the ground. Can be countered by jumping. The fight is identical to that of the other Long-arm Centipede, but without any minion and in a more cramped room, as such performing consecutive deflections on the first four attacks of his Flurry combo, then on the latter five and ending with a deflection against his last hit, before jump-kicking his Perilous Grip will make short work of this Mini-Boss. It's best to Jump-kick backward, since he may start executing his Quick Slash combo while Wolf is still vulnerable in mid-air. The Centipede will deflect most attacks thrown at him, so focusing on filling up his Posture bar is more important than attempting to deplete his Vitality. Gokan's Sugar is recommended to not risk getting Posture broken mid-combo. Like against the Corrupted Monk, the stagger of Shinobi Firecracker and Fistful of Ash doesn't have any cooldown on this Mini-Boss. The Mist Raven can be used to get behind him, to find a safe opportunity to use other Prosthetic Tools like the Flame Vent and the Sabimaru. Notes Depending on which order some Bosses are fought, Vengeful Apparitions may appear inside the shrine, once this Mini-Boss is defeated. Trivia He's one of the few non-apparition type Mini-Bosses that can't suffer a stealth deathblow. His original name could be read as "Jirafu" or "Jirafu", but it was translated to "Giraffe" probably because it's written in katakana. The Long-Arm Centipede Giraffe is definitely not a giraffe, but it definitely is a tricky boss to overcome. In our Sekiro Long-Arm Centipede boss guide, we'll be providing you with all the instructions you need on how to beat Long-Arm Centipede Giraffe in Sekiro, as well as how to cheese Long-Arm Centipede Giraffe, for when the fight gets really tiring. How to Beat Long-Arm Centipede If you're only here for the essential tips on how to best Long-Arm Centipede Giraffe, then check out the list below. The Long-Arm Centipede Giraffe always opens with a massive chain of attacks. Instead of dodging or jumping over the chain of attacks, try and parry them all. The boss nearly always follows up a chain attack with a red kanji attack, which you can jump over. The Firecracker is excellent for stunning this boss out of any attack. In the second phase, Long-Arm can interrupt the chain attacks for the single red kanji attack, so watch out for this. Long-Arm Centipede Strategy Well, this sure doesn't look like any giraffe we've ever seen. You can find the Long-Arm Centipede Giraffe down the path from the Gun Fort Sculptor's Idol, which itself is located in the Sunken Valley area of the game. As soon as you enter the arena with the Long-Arm, you want to close the distance to the boss immediately. You'll want to close the distance as soon as you're in the arena. | Hirun Cryer/USG, Activision/FromSoftware This boss is nearly impossible to fight on fair ground, so we're going to give you a slight cheese tactic to win this fight. Firstly, you're going to want to acquire the Firecracker Prosthetic arm for the Shinobi Prosthetic (head over to our Sekiro Prosthetics guide if you haven't got it yet). Long-Arm Centipede Giraffe Weakness You now need to let the Firecracker rip, right in the face of the Long-Arm, whenever it goes to attack. The default attack pattern of the Long-Arm is unfortunately to chain together right around eight attacks in a row, so the goal in this fight is to never let that happen, and instead keep the monster at bay with the repeated use of the Firecracker. Make sure to bring the Firecracker with you. | Hirun Cryer/USG, Activision/FromSoftware But, your ammo for the Firecracker is eventually going to run dry, especially if you haven't been purchasing the upgrades for carrying more Spirit Emblems. So every time the boss is stunned from the Firecracker, you need to make sure you're using your combat art attack, instead of just a normal attack on the boss. As always, watch out for the red kanji. | Hirun Cryer/USG, Activision/FromSoftware This is so you can raise the Posture meter of the Long-Arm, without running your Spirit Emblem supplies dry. Make sure you're hitting home with the best combat art attack you have available, while not letting the Long-Arm get off any attacks by using the Firecracker. How to Cheese Long-Arm Centipede Giraffe There really is a set strategy on how to overcome Long-Arm Centipede Giraffe in Sekiro. But, if you're not one for sticking to the best laid plans, you can either use the Firecracker or the Flame Vent Prosthetics against the boss. Long-Arm hates both of these tools, and using them will allow you to get in a few clean hits on the boss with ease.
